

A formal and individual complaint to the FCC:

The airwaves are the property of the individual citizens of the United States like myself. The changes on the June 02, 2003 FCC Agenda expected to be adopted on June 02, 2003 affect my individual rights to have a variety of information with different ownership sources available to me as an individual both at my home above and as I travel throughout the United States.

A free press and non-monopolistic airwaves are vital to an informed citizen population including me specifically. Our democracy is based on a system of checks and balances of which free press and non-monopolistic media is essential to our great democracy's functioning.

I object to the secrecy the FCC has used in these proceedings and how that affects my individual rights to contribute in a meaningful way to our democracy. Apparently you have not published the changes you intend to make, even to our elected representatives. I object to your pre-meeting non-disclosure procedures stripping myself, other interested citizens and our elected representatives from access to the changes you intend to make that will affect my life and my fellow citizens. This is not prudent regulation and management of our PUBLIC AIRWAVES owned by all of us, not just companies in that business.

I have voiced my objections to my elected representatives on your adoption of these new non-disclosed regulations. That is all I can do including this formal complaint to prevent the stealing of the public airwaves that will have a direct impact on me to function productively within this democracy as noted above.

It is in the individual citizens interest NOT to make your proposed changes. Please reconsider your intentions, protect my rights and our airwaves by not adopting your proposed changes.
